

Safety for Citizens

- Whoever wants to sell in a region should also produce there
- Environmentally friendly production is essential for our survival
- Citizens in employment contribute to the supply of all people
- Everyone must have access to all effective medicines with affordable prices

The globalisation of the last decade has not brought a better distribution of work for all, but has promoted a monopolisation in those parts of the world where the conditions seemed best to achieve the highest returns. This has caused waste of resources and damage to the environment and living conditions of all the world's citizens.

Global supply chains not only add to the environmental burden, but are an additional reason for shortages. Particularly affected by this for over 10 years has been the ever-worsening supply of medicines. Although medicines are affected on a large scale, the establishment of new industries far away from those to be supplied is pushed forward, regardless of the known serious effects on the environment and the health of the inhabitants. Political leaders can only put a stop to this if the demands raised by citizens for the regionalisation of supply structures are implemented immediately.

We call for a serious turnaround from the "now" to a better future, in a responsible turn towards the needs of the citizens.
